Bridget Boyle was the third child of Michael and Ellen Boyle, born two years after her elder sister, Mary. She grew up on the Boyle homestead in Garryowen, and married one of the Boyle family's neighbors, James Reddin, in 1893 at the age of 31. The wedding came three years after the death of her mother.

In 1894, Bridget gave birth to twin girls, Mayme and Grace. Bridget's third daughter, Margaret, was born in 1896.

There were quite a few Reddin relations living in the area around Garryowen and Cascade at that time, so it can be difficult to sort out the references to the various families in the pages of the Cascade Pioneer. (For example, there are two Mayme Reddins and multiple James, John and Michael Reddins.)

In the Jackson County plat maps of 1893 and 1913, our James Reddin is listed as owning about 150 acres, adjacent to properties held by other branches of the Reddin family – and diagonally touching Austin Boyle's land.

The 1915 obituary of James' father, Michael, mentions James' family as living in La Crosse, Wisconsin. James and Bridget are listed in the 1910 and 1920 federal censuses for Jackson County, Iowa – but they don't appear in the 1915 Iowa state census. This suggests that the family spent a relatively brief time in Wisconsin for some reason, but returned to the homestead after 1915, perhaps to fill the gap created by Michael Reddin's death. It's worth noting that James' brother, Joseph – who married Bridget's sister, Rose – moved from Garryowen to Wisconsin Rapids (then known as Grand Rapids) in 1912. La Crosse and Wisconsin Rapids are about 100 miles apart.

Once James and Bridget returned to their native Iowa, they stayed there. They lived on the Garryowen farm until 1939. They both suffered debilitating falls that February – which led to their retirement in Cascade.

William Kinsella, the son of Margaret (Reddin) Kinsella, passed along this reminiscence of his grandmother: "I can remember my grandmother Bridget Boyle Reddin's love of playing checkers and cards, and telling stories – after her hip was broken, resulting from a fall on the winter ice, restricting her ambulatory capability. She was a great cook and baker. Also very conservative."

Retirement didn't last long. James died on June 14, 1943. Chronic myocarditis, hypostatic pneumonia and senility were listed as the causes of death. Exactly a month later, Bridget died of chronic myocarditis, anemia and senility at the age of 81.
